

WORLD SYMPOSIUM ON CHORAL MUSIC 2023

Call for Choirs and Vocal Ensembles

Within the theme of Changing Horizons, WSCM 2023 aims to draw on IFCM's commitment to representation from and within regions of our world. Choirs and Vocal Ensembles are encouraged to imagine creative programs grounded in diversity through the inclusion of repertoire and performance practices that showcase different social, ethnic, geographical, and/or cultural backgrounds within each ensemble's region. Considering the music of earlier periods in your country sets the background for newer music. Including folk and popular traditions side-by-side with more academic works could serve as an aural map of the development of singing in your region. Highlighting songs with different vocal timbres and rhythmic blueprints could offer a curated journey through your musical landscape. WSCM 2023 provides a platform where we can celebrate the wonders, the richness, and the beauty of as many singing traditions as possible from across the globe while simultaneously exploring ways in which choral traditions are evolving, changing, and transforming.

WSCM 2023 encourages submissions of programs that align with the symposium theme Changing Horizons, a theme that we hope will be interpreted freely and with flair, drawing from a broad range of repertoire and styles.

Reflect on the following questions as you think about creating your proposed programs for WSCM 2023.

- What makes collective singing in your area unique? How are ensembles constituted that might represent the broader population of your region?
- What ethnic, racial, and national groups does your choir represent in terms of repertoire, styles, aesthetics, and choir population?
- What is the nature of the relationship between the language/texts and the music that serves as their vehicle in your singing tradition?
- What are the singing practices and traditions that are generally underrepresented in your region? What are the ensembles who are working in respectful/reciprocal collaborations with indigenous music and culture bearers of their region?
- What is the relationship between Western compositional techniques and the local musical techniques including indigenous, folk, and traditional cultural practices?
- What are the innovative trends of ensemble singing in your region? How are these new developments connected with historical traditions? What are your relationships to local composers and music makers?
- How does your ensemble work with oral traditions, i.e., singing that does not rely on Western notation and literacy, or with traditions that do not use the well-tempered, diatonic scale?

We welcome singing ensembles that practice music indigenous to their homes. We encourage all Choirs and Vocal Ensembles to become cultural ambassadors of their countries and regions, showcasing the immense wealth of their vocal traditions. This international symposium aims to celebrate the human practice of singing together.

Selection Criteria

The WSCM 2023 aims to showcase the diversity of vocal and choral music at the highest level within any singing tradition. The selection committee will evaluate submissions on the basis of authenticity, technique, innovation, and connection with the theme Changing Horizons. In order to achieve the goals of diversity, inclusion, and equity, the invited choirs will represent a geographical balance as well as a balance of styles, programming, and performance formats.
